

FAQ's

Where do you shop?

I shop everywhere! Once I get to know the client, their current style, where they want to go with it along with their budget, I will know what stores to go to. I do ask my clients what their favorite stores are and if it fits with their new style and my vision for them, of course I'll go there. To give you an idea though, I can thrift, go to Marshalls or TJ Maxx, local boutiques, Nordstroms, Macys, etc. I work with all budgets!

Do you style petites? Do you style plus size?

Absolutely! I honestly can style any shape and size. I even style clients who go up and down with their weight.

Do you style men?

Yes, I love styling men! Bachelors, athletes, tall, slender, you name it. Again, I style all shapes, sizes AND genders.

Do you work on commission?

No, I work on flat fees. I truly believe in 1) Utilizing my clients current wardrobe as much as I can to reduce our carbon footprint - unless the client really wants to toss everything out or if I really think we need to start over, and 2) I don't believe in trends except for the fit of the items so I'm not going to push all these crazy patterns and colors on you just because they are in trend. I take pride in my business in being personable and just making you feel good about yourself so in order to do that, that may only be starting out with a few pieces. I'm not a salesperson, I'm a people's person.

I'm scared that you're going to come into my closet and toss everything out, including some sentimental pieces.

Sure, it may be scary to have a stranger come into your closet to look at what you have, but I guarantee you I DO NOT judge. There is a reason why you called me (or are even thinking about calling me) and I'm here to help! If you have that sentimental piece, we can keep it; we just may want to go shopping to update it a little bit by "building around it". We can always split up your appointments too! I have a good feeling for when people are scared or overwhelmed so I may even suggest that we split them up even before you bring it up. The last thing I want to do is have you regret working with a professional stylist and you still feel terrible about your clothes and the way you look.

What types of clients do you work with?

Where do I begin...I work with a lot of clients, both men and women. I've worked with upper 20 year olds that realize they can't dress like they're still in college. I work with new moms and dads who may have gone through some body changes (even that lifestyle change can take a toll). I work with empty nesters because now they can focus on themselves. I also work with divorcees or anyone else that has gone through a lifestyle change and just wants a makeover! And then there are business professionals; I work a lot with them too. These can include stay at home parents going back into the office setting, home office setting going into the office setting, a lot of public speakers, new entrepreneurs that need to match their business and brand, people who got a managerial position that now needs to look the part or even women in a male-dominated industry or vice versa! And let's not forget about those one-off clients that just need something for that holiday party or special occasion ;)

Do you complete makeovers like those reality tv shows?

Sure do! I have a bunch of resources and a team that I can pull in to makeover your hair and makeup all the way up to your home! This can be a very overwhelming process for a lot of people so we do suggest spreading it out over a course of a few weeks, but in the end you will be looking and feeling great about yourself and everything around you!
